

Erpo collection: The Principle of Comfort

Over the past few decades, the Erpo Möbelwerk GmbH has been writing a piece of German cultural history with the "Principle of Comfort", or, in point of fact, a piece of seating culture history. And the history is far from over yet. Because Erpo recently presented a new collection model with Lucca: Contemporary and yet with a timeless exclusivity. But back to the beginning. "Lugano" is the mother of all Erpo's seating elements, because Erpo defined the collection series with this upholstered furniture in 1985. The "Principle of Comfort" had names and style. As a German upholstered furniture manufacturer, Erpo set new standards in seating comfort, quality and workmanship with this. The Lugano was followed by other, even nowadays, successful models such as City, Colorado, Porto, Manhattan and Faro. All striking in design and perfect examples of Made in Germany. The series collection is much more than just a promise of quality. The demand for design is just as high as the demand for comfort. Every collection model is a piece of designer furniture whose functionality reveals the actual philosophy of Erpo: The Erpo effect. The secret behind this is Erpo's very own patent for the sophisticated and precise seat and backrest mechanism. By shifting body weight, the armchairs and sofas from the series collection flexibly adapt to the personal sitting habits of the person seated in it. Erpo has a ten year guarantee period on its functional metal fittings. Durability is also a significant factor in the high-quality tubular steel frame combination for adjustment of the seat and backrests. In this way, the series collection is synonymous with a very long friendship between man and his sofa. Also owing to the fact that the series collection provides such a wealth of individual design options. Depending upon the model, there are two different heights of seat, different seat depths and heights for the back to choose from, from the individual armchair up to the seating group with stool. As premium class upholstered furniture, every model in the series collection is available in a wide range of top-quality types of leather and colours as well as fabric qualities. The design of collection is purist - sometimes delicate, sometimes heavy but always bang on trend. This shows the true greatness of a premium brand. The outstanding design and the exclusive charismatic appearance of the series collection from Erpo is equally well at styling rooms as it is commercial areas and exudes its own, individual sophisticated style.
